

DISSEMINATION GrantCOMMUNITY-ACADEMIC RESEARCH PARTNERSHIPS
GRANTS PROGRAM
REQUEST FOR APPLICATIONS
2015*I. Background

The Community Engagement Research Program (CERP) is a core component of the Atlanta Clinical Translational Science Institute (ACTSI), a collaborative effort of Emory University, Morehouse School of Medicine, and Georgia Institute of Technology (Georgia Tech). The CERP aims to support community-university research partnerships, facilitate community input into university research, and build community capacity to conduct health research that is both responsive and relevant to the health needs of the community.

This grants program is designed to meet these aims through the provision of funding and technical assistance to community-based organizations (CBOs) to strengthen an existing community academic partnership by supporting their dissemination activities. The CERP invites proposals from CBOs in an established partnership with academic researchers affiliated with Morehouse School of Medicine, Emory University, or Georgia Tech. Selected partnerships must have already completed a community-engaged research project and must use the funds for dissemination activities. If selected, the CBO and/or academic partner will collaboratively write at least one paper for a peer-reviewed journal and prepare at least one dissemination product or event for a lay audience/community members (e.g., host a community forum, prepare and distribute research or policy briefs). The intent of these activities is to provide time and resources for sharing research study results back to different audiences, both academic and community. The grant will provide $10,000 over an 18 month period. The partnership will also be provided with a Graduate Research Assistant support to help with the dissemination activities (5-10 hours per week).

The project will be funded in two phases as follows:

Phase 1 (November 16, 2015 to May 31, 2016):

During this period, grantees and researchers will attend a kick-off meeting and begin planning in collaboration with their faculty partner. Funding for Phase 1 will be up to $5,000. The deliverables include an outline of the journal article and a detailed plan for the dissemination event/activity.

Phase 2 (June 1, 2016 to May 31, 2017):

During this period, grantees will draft and submit a journal article to a peer-reviewed academic publication and conduct the community-focused dissemination activity. Funding for Phase 2 will be $5,000. Deliverables for this phase include: 1) the submitted journal article, 2) documentation of the community-focused dissemination product/event. All grantees will be required to participate in a cross-site evaluation.
